Monomaterial jars for effortless recycling

Quadpack's most popular QLine ranges available in 100% PP

Recyclable packaging should require minimal effort to recycle. Monomaterial containers make it easy, needing no disassembly. International beauty packaging manufacturer and provider Quadpack has made its most popular QLine jars available in 100% polypropylene (PP). Its Regula, Konico and Soul ranges offer brands a diverse selection in this fully-recyclable, highly-compatible material.

Made in Europe at Quadpack's injection-moulding facilities, the ranges come in a variety of shapes and capacities. Branding can be applied using a host of decoration techniques such as colour matching, silk screening and hot stamping. Brands can truly express themselves with the wide array of aesthetic choices, ensuring their DNA shines through. The ranges comprise:

- Regula PP jar: a classic jar shape available in 50, 100 and 200ml capacities.
- Soul jar: an elegant, rounded shape available in 100 and 200ml capacities.
- Konico jar: a playful, conical shape available in 50 and 200ml capacities.

The different capacities make them suitable for a wide range of formulations, from eye contour creams to body- and haircare formulas.

Quadpack's sustainability strategy aims to make a positive impact through its people, processes and products. Monomaterial pack design is one of the core approaches. Quadpack aims to ensure that its QLine portfolio has a high level of sustainability by 2025, according to a unique rating system based on life-cycle assessments and sustainability attributes.
